

The Alberta Limited Legal Services Project

Providing the legal services
you want, when you want them,
at a price you can afford

Lawyers are usually hired to take a case from start to finish, which can sometimes become a little expensive.

When you hire a lawyer to provide a limited legal service, you're hiring the lawyer to handle just a part of your case or to perform a specific task. You may have hired a lawyer to provide a limited legal service before, if you've bought or sold a house or had a will written up.

The Limited Legal Services Project is about helping lawyers provide more limited legal services to more clients, and about letting people who believe they may not be able to afford a lawyer know that other options are available.

There are many limited services that lawyers can provide without having to do additional work. These include:

- providing legal advice about a legal problem, including second opinions
  - giving an opinion about an agreement
  - doing research about a legal problem or preparing an argument
  - preparing court documents and writing affidavits
  - going to court with you, or on your behalf
  - preparing a settlement offer, or reviewing a settlement offer you have received

The Limited Legal Services Project is about helping clients get limited legal services. We also want to find out how limited services work for clients. How helpful is this type of legal service? Does using limited services improve people's ability to resolve their legal problems?

More than 50 lawyers, from all across Alberta and working in most areas of the law, are participating in our project and have agreed to offer limited legal services to their clients.

For 18 months, between April 2017 and October 2018, we will be surveying participating lawyers and their clients to find out how satisfied they are with limited legal services. Clients who complete our short survey will be entered into a monthly draw for a $100 prepaid Visa gift card.
